Interactive effects of ambient lighting on young workers' exposure to ultraviolet radiation. Exposure to ultraviolet (UV) radiation of the World Health Organization (WHO) maximal erythral dose (MED) level is known to cause many deleterious effects on human skin, including erythema. The erythral action spectrum for UV radiation shows a strong wavelength dependence; thus, the relative proportion of UV radiation reaching the skin depends on spectral radiance, the wavelength distribution of the ambient illuminant. Outdoor workers' exposure to UV radiation is known to be higher than that of office workers. We collected
